

Dear FCC:

After reading the proposed rulemaking on the Do-Not-Call Implementation Act, I am glad to see the FTC released an order establishing a national do-not-call registry. Telemarketing practices these days are not only annoying to me and my family, but are also an invasion of my privacy. By researching the number of consumers who have placed their telephone numbers on the registry, the Commission should be able to determine by those numbers that nobody likes to have telemarketers call them at home especially when they just get off work or are in the middle of dinner...
